Guys, seriously, you are wasting your time. This is origami for the sake of paper folding.

The 'required to make reasonable attempt' to prevent kids accessing porn ends up being a 'button' that reads 'Click here if you are Under 18'.

Kids aren't stupid, so they click the 'over 18' button.

The ONLY way to restrict kids access to porn is to block it at source, by not allowing it on the internet in this country or access to offshore from this country, but this would prevent adults accessing it also, and constitutes an unreasonable restriction.

So it won't happen. And you can't stop it.

Far, far better to run continuous education campaigns to show kids what is right and wrong about sex and sexual behaviours.

But knock yourselves out. Anything else is going to be 'helpful' but still virtually a waste of time.

If kids want access to porn they can get it. Apps can't police it.

They can download stuff from their parents PC and email it to themselves and pass it around phone to phone via email.

You literally cannot stop them.

Thanks for your time
