OFFICIAL

Hi Anthea,

Thank you for the opportunity to input.

We have attached our feedback on the paper. We also wanted to highlight our key points of feedback on the proposed approaches.

As an overarching note, the proposed approaches will result in the expansion of eSafety's remit and powers. eSafety will need to be adequately resourced to support this expansion if it is to deliver on the Government's commitments, particularly in relation to the new removal notices framework and especially if it will come into immediate effect. This is in addition to the resource requirements to implement any duty of care framework.

Our overarching feedback on the proposed approaches are outlined below.

We are happy to discuss our feedback further, if helpful. We would be grateful for continued visibility as this work progresses.

Thanks

Subject: FW: Duty of Care consultation paper and stakeholder list [SEC=OFFICIAL]

OFFICIAL: Sensitive

Hi Andrew,

Thank you for providing us the opportunity to comment on the draft duty of care materials, and the chat earlier today.

Please see attached our feedback on the draft consultation paper. We're finalising our feedback on the stakeholder list and will provide you that tomorrow.

In addition to our feedback in the document, we will also provide the following overarching feedback:

- We have been mindful of the request for redline feedback. s 47C
- We have highlighted in the document a number of practical operational challenges and complexities. This includes:
 - s 47C
- We welcome further detail on timing. This is so we can ensure aligned messaging, where necessary, or simply so we are aware of the level of detail being provided to external stakeholders who eSafety also engages with. For example, preliminary work on the review of phase 1 of the codes has commenced and stakeholders are raising with eSafety many of the issues canvassed in the paper.

It'd be great to get a better understanding of timing and next steps so we can brief our seniors.

We are happy to arrange a meeting to discuss our feedback in more detail, if needed.

Thanks,

Hi s 22

Many thanks for clarifying that point!

Please see attached eSafety's feedback on the BOSE transition paper. Our responses to your questions commence from page 6.

We also attach our draft options for the duty of care framework, to help illustrate the distinction and relationship between transparency and investigation notices.

If helpful, we are happy to speak further to our draft framework in Tuesday's duty of care workshop. I note we've been corresponding with s 22 about the workshop.

Please feel free to reach out if you have any questions or would like to discuss our feedback further.

Kind regards

Hello S 22

Thank you for your email, including both providing the initial draft paper and for flagging the other case studies and papers you're preparing and considering. This is helpful for our planning and to be aware of the issues you want to explore further.

Thank you also for your well wishes (final week indeed!). As discussed, S 22 will be acting in the role in the first instance. Thank you for copying her into this email. Given my leave dates and the timeframes for comment, she'll provide our response on the initial papers.

eSafety has also been considering suitable topics for case studies and discussion papers. Is the Department open to hearing topics that eSafety would suggest, in addition to those below, or if there is a way to thematically structure the themes to capture multiple, connected issues?

We're also working on clearance for the questions you asked regarding compliance and enforcement. We'll endeavour to have our responses with you as soon as possible.

Kind regards,
